Introduction

The Canada Research Chair in Rural and Small Town Studies at the University of Northern British Columbia has been supporting community based research into the social and economic changes important to the rural and small town places of northern B.C. Past research has included studies of community resilience in the 100 Mile House, Williams Lake, and Quesnel areas. Other work has looked at public participation in resource planning exercises in Quesnel, Dawson Creek, Smithers, Clearwater, Powell River, and Kaslo. Recently, extensive work has been done with Mackenzie and Tumbler Ridge. Some of the results of these studies can be found on the website: http://web.unbc.ca/geography/faculty/greg.

Presently, research projects are underway in the Terrace, Prince Rupert, and Kitimat areas as well as in the Robson-Canoe valleys. In each of our research exercises, we are keenly interested in how people are reacting to opportunities and challenges in the places they live and work. To ensure that our work does not focus only upon some ‘temporarily important’ topic, we conduct extensive reviews of local historical information so as to create a deeper portrait of these places. In the end, we are interested in how people work to address challenges and opportunities in places, over time.

One of the key sources of historical information which we use is local newspapers. We read all the editions of the papers we could get a hold of and identify issues and stories for later references and analysis. In the Robson and Canoe valleys we used the time period 1970 to 2002 to frame our research. The year 1970 is about 10 years before the recession of the early 1980s, a point in time considered by many to have marked a turning point in B.C.’s resource economy. For this time period we read through available editions of the:

- Robson Valley Courier;
- Canoe Mountain Echo; and
- The Valley Sentinel.

In this process, we recorded article topics and headlines, by date, and by page number. This report includes a summary list of that newspaper information and we are pleased to make it available to the people of the Robson and Canoe valleys. We hope that it can be a useful starting point for research into issues from the recent past.
Acknowledgements

Access to historical newspapers acquires a great deal of assistance. We would like to especially thank Bill Mahoney and his staff at the Valley Sentinel, Wendy Smith and her staff at the Valemount Public Library, and the residents of Valemount and McBride for their hospitality. On our UNBC research team, Onkar Buttar, Shiloh Durkee, Sue Frizzell, Kelly Giesbrecht, and Virginia Pow helped tremendously on this and other projects.

Instructions

The following timeline gives a brief historical overview of the Robson and Canoe valley region. The timeline begins in January of 1970 and finishes in December of 2002. The timeline consists of brief summaries of significant events as recorded through newspaper headlines and articles.

These events have been collected from local newspapers for the following time periods:
- the Robson Valley Courier (RVC) - 1970 - 1987;
- the Canoe Mountain Echo (CME) - 1973 - 1987; and

Abbreviations are only provided for the Robson Valley Courier (RVC) and the Canoe Mountain Echo (CME) to indicate article sources for items listed between 1970 and 1987. All of the events listed between 1988 and 2002 were obtained from the Valley Sentinel.

The timeline is divided by year. Each year is further sub-divided into 16 subject headings:
- aboriginal services,
- agriculture,
- business services,
- communications (Internet, phone, postal service, newspapers, and t.v.),
- community services,
- education,
- emergency (911, ambulance, fire protection, police, and search and rescue),
- environment,
- forestry,
- government,
- health,
- housing,
- physical infrastructure (transportation services, roads, highways, train, air, water, sewage, and hydro),
- senior services,
- tourism and recreation (accommodation, entertainment, tourism, and recreation),
- youth services, and
- other.

In some cases, not every subject is covered within a year. Each event consists of the date of the event, an abbreviation of the newspaper the story came from, and a brief description of the story. We hope that these summaries may provide a starting point for people to undertake work on topics of interest to them.
